- Chemical, process and reaction engineering; unit operations
- Separation, purification and mass transfer
- Materials, electrochemistry, corrosion and surface engineering
- Modelling, simulation and optimisation of industrial processes
- Water, wastewater and surface water quality
- Waste treatment, recycling and secondary raw materials

- Food safety, contaminants and residue analysis
- Quality control and assurance in food production
- Nutrition, product development and enrichment
- Sensory evaluation and shelf-life studies

WHAT "MANAGEMENT" MEANS HERE

Operational, technical and process management – the control, planning and optimisation of real processes and resources, not business administration:

- Process management in chemical plants
- Waste and emission management
- Quality management in food production
- Resource and energy management in industry

Organisational management, business administration and economics fall outside the scope unless the paper addresses the engineering or processing operation itself.
